Code of conduct

Purpose

We believe all our events should be open to everyone. That’s why we are committed to providing a friendly, safe and welcoming environment for all, regardless of gender, sexual orientation, disability, ethnicity, religion, job role or anything else.

This code of conduct outlines our expectations for participant behaviour at our events, both virtual and in-person. It also explains the steps we will take if participants behave in an unacceptable way.

We invite all speakers and attendees to follow our code of conduct to help us create a positive event experience for everyone.

The consequences of unacceptable behaviour

We will not tolerate unacceptable behaviour at any of our events. Anyone asked to stop unacceptable behaviour will be expected to do so immediately. If a participant is behaving in this way, the West of England AHSN may take any action it deems appropriate, including giving a warning, or a temporary ban or permanent ban from attending future events (including both virtual and in-person).

What to do if you witness or are subjected to unacceptable behaviour at one of our events

If someone behaves towards you in an unacceptable way, or you notice this is happening to another event attendee, or you have any other concerns about people’s behaviour, please notify a member of the West of England AHSN event team as soon as possible.

The West of England AHSN event team will be available to assist any participants experiencing unacceptable behaviour to feel safe for the duration of the event. We take all reports very seriously and these will remain completely confidential.

Photography and video

Occasionally we take photographs or video recordings at our events. By attending one of our events (virtual or physical), you agree to have your image used by us in our post-event communications.
